Client: insurance agency

Purpose: customer take-away item

A large insurance agency noticed that most clients showed up for meetings without something for taking notes. Wanting to improve their customer service, the agency ordered the #NS4A6A25 Souvenir® 4" x 6" Scratch Pad and the #RS BIC® Round Stic® Pen for each of their agents. The scratch pad was imprinted with the agent's contact information so that customers could easily follow up if they had questions after the meeting. Clients appreciated the agency anticipating their needs, and agents notice an uptick in callbacks once they started using the scratch pads and pens.

Client: event planning company

Purpose: reintroduce services after
COVID restrictions lifted

Once COVID restrictions lifted, an event planning company wanted to let local businesses know that it was time to party! Since the #45448 Koozie® britePix® Can Kooler folds flat, it was the ideal promo product to include in a mass mailing. Potential clients often mentioned it when they called, saying it was such a fun surprise when they opened the envelope, and that it was, of course, the perfect item to advertise event planning services. The company has seen its revenues return to near pre-pandemic levels due in part to its clever marketing efforts.

Client: health system

Purpose: wellness challenge educational piece

A large health system sponsored a January wellness challenge at each of its clinic locations. The challenge asked participants to track a daily healthy action along with the number of minutes they moved. When participants signed up, they received the #1301 Healthy Eating calendar. Challenge organizers liked that each recipe had a description of its health benefits along with nutrition facts. The calendar also provided a place for those participating to track their progress. In a post-challenge survey, a majority of participants noted that the calendar was a good motivational tool and that they planned to use it for the remainder of the year for cooking inspiration and to note their progress over time.

Client: public elementary school

Purpose: fundraiser incentive

Each year an elementary school holds a fun walk/run as a fundraiser. In prior years, they awarded prizes to students based on how much money they collected. However, the school wanted to change the competitive nature of the event, so they opted instead to give each student participating the #AP5040ECO Recycled PET On The Move Backpack on the day of the walk/run. The PTA solicited donations from local businesses, so each backpack included a bottle of water, a pair of sunglasses, and a granola bar that students could enjoy during or after the event. The backpacks were a big hit and added to the celebratory tone of the day.

Client: church

Purpose: fellowship coffee bar

A church was expanding its fellowship opportunities to include a coffee bar. However, they were concerned with how much waste it might produce with single-use coffee cups. A generous donor stepped forward and helped the church purchase enough of the #46189 Dye Sublimation Mug - 11 oz. to cover Sunday services. The full-color wraparound provided plenty of room for the church to highlight its missions work, which is where donations to the coffee bar went. The missions team even sold the mugs as a way to raise even more funds for their work.

Case study

A funeral home was developing a new company image and wanted promotional items that tastefully represented their brand with contemporary designs. They wanted to start with office items like note pads, writing instruments and folders as these items are used every day in their business. They chose the Souvenir® Path Pen because of the distinctive design with a modern twist. The navy barrel color perfectly matched their new brand identity while the chrome accents and design details gave the pen a sophisticated feel. Funeral home representatives used the pens as leave-behinds, for on-site services, during client meetings and in information packets.

Case study

A manufacturing company was excited to resume hosting its annual company picnic after the local public health department lifted COVID protocols. They wanted a unique way to announce the event and chose the #45448 Koozie® britePix® Can Cooler because it folds flat for easy mailing. Several months before the picnic, they sent each employee two can coolers imprinted with the date of the gathering. Employees loved that the save-the-date was useful, and most brought their can coolers to the cookout.

Case study

A large pet supply chain started offering aquarium-care classes in their stores. Instructors used the #10027 Lil' Chizler™ to demonstrate an easy way to keep aquariums clean. They showed how it can be maneuvered into all sorts of corners and tight spaces to remove tough algae build-up. At the conclusion of the class, participants received a free Lil' Chizler™ when they bought any aquarium-related item.

Case study

A local youth sports organization wanted to boost enrollment in their softball program. They offered the #16167 Recycled PET Two-Tone Drawstring Backpack as an incentive for players to bring a friend to a free practice. If the friend signed up, she also received a backpack. They chose this bag not only for its recycled content but also because it was the perfect size for a pair of softball cleats. The organization was pleasantly surprised when almost 100% of their players showed up with a friend, and they were able to enroll 55% of the guests.

Case study

An internet service provider secured a sponsorship to have a mobile pop-up in the tailgating area for a professional sports team. Their goal was to increase brand share in the market through awareness and new customer contracts. They decided to offer the #32481 SCX Design® Speaker Light Ring 3W as an incentive gift. They liked that the speaker provided exceptional sound quality while being small enough to fit in a pocket, and the light-up logo and premium gift box sealed the deal. The response from game-day fans was positive and the company saw higher traffic than projected at their pop-up. The company placed another order of the speakers so they could extend the promotion through the end of the season.

Case study

In preparation for Nurses Week, an oncology center wanted to plan a special appreciation event for their staff. The administration reached out to patients receiving regular treatment at the facility and collected short messages of thanks from those willing to participate. They chose five of the messages and had them imprinted on 25-sheet pads of the #P4A3A25 Souvenir® 3" x 3" Sticky Note™. Each nurse received a gift basket that included one of each of the five pads. The facility continued to use the Sticky Note™ pads throughout the year, and patients and nurses loved the positive reminders accompanying each note.

Case study

A financial services firm sent customers an update on office hours and available services and included a calendar to thank clients for their loyalty. They chose the #1600 Motivations for its inspiring messages and overall quality. The firm added a custom extra sheet to the calendar, which included a reminder to schedule free quarterly financial reviews. The company saw an uptick in appointments over the year, and agents asked for the calendar to become an annual mailing.

Case study

A large insurance company was reviewing its recognition program and wanted to find a special way to mark 20-year anniversaries. After much consideration, they settled on the #25018 Six Coasters with Solid Cherry Chest. They thought the brass and cherry wood combination provided a rich feel, and the heft of the coasters demonstrated the gift's high-quality materials. The coaster set reflected the right level of appreciation for long-term employees and could be used either at home or the office, making it a versatile choice as well.

Case study

A vehicle manufacturer was looking for a giveaway to celebrate the release of a redesigned off-road model. In keeping with the rugged and outdoor-inspired features of the overhauled side-by-side, the manufacturer liked the #26121 Koozie® Kamp Chair because it was made of quality materials with features that would appeal to campers, hunters, tailgaters, beachgoers, and more. The chairs were imprinted with the vehicle model name, year, and tagline and were given as an appreciation gift to the employees who worked on the line that manufactured the vehicle. The chairs were also shipped to dealerships across the country for use in floor displays and as giveaway items to customers who purchased the new model.

Case study

A free clinic in a large city received a grant for outreach. Their goal was to grow awareness of their services among populations that might typically avoid seeking regular health screenings. Clinic staff wanted to find a practical item they could hand out and that had room to include informational brochures. The #41061 Laureate First Aid Bag met all their criteria. They distributed the kits at shelters, meal centers, and food shelves. They also spent a day handing out the bags in areas of the city with a large homeless population. Over several months, they saw visits to the clinic increase by 20% and identified common conditions that they could build future educational campaigns around.

Case study

A midsize car repair shop was approached by a driving school to do a presentation on roadside safety and emergency preparedness. The repair shop saw this as an opportunity to not only educate drivers but also to build relationships and hopefully convert the students into customers. At the end of their presentation, the repair shop gave all the students a #21214 3-in-1 COB Emergency Tool imprinted with their company logo and website. They chose this item because it was the perfect size to keep in a glove compartment, and the safety tool features tied into their presentation. The repair shop also distributed these tools at community events to spread awareness about roadside safety and their company. Over the year, they saw a 15% increase in new customer service appointments.

Case study

A country club had the opportunity to host a pro-level tournament but needed to close the course prior to the event for aeration. It was prime golf season, and club management was concerned about upsetting members with the course closure. They included the #61249 Hat Clip with Ball Marker, four grandstand tournament tickets, and vouchers for a nearby course with the closure notification letter. Members were pleased with the package, and the club received very few complaints. The clips were so popular, the club ordered additional quantities to sell during the tournament.
